If the file is not owned by anyone, and the owner does not allow that, then someone else can choose to take the content and therefore take ownership of that file in the project. That can happen in two ways:

- If you have the permission to access the file, then you can take the content and add it to the digital canvas of the review, where it can be used as a contributor to that file. This is called the upload permission.
- If the owner has the permission to access the content, then you can download the content as a local file, open it in the review, but add it as a contributor.

Then, you open up the program and start sending the same number of messages as you normally would -- the ones associated with your desktop will appear on your mobile phone's screen.
