You can download the tutorials from the Adobe website at www.adobe.com/products/photoshop. Photoshop Elements: Dream with the Digital Dreamer Photoshop Elements ($80 list) is a companion to Photoshop. With Photoshop Elements, you can edit and transform raster images, but your options are limited. Photoshop Elements is not a full-fledged editor and has a smaller range of options. The simpler interface is geared toward beginners who have never used Photoshop before. As with other Adobe products, you can also use Elements to create, manipulate, and save your own digital images, but you won't be able to work with animations, layers, or much advanced editing. Unlike Photoshop, Elements offers multiple levels of functionality, with increasingly complex features and higher price tags. You get the following features with Photoshop Elements: Editing: Image correction and enhancement — You can perform color and tone adjustments, restore images, correct color or pattern distortions, and enhance overall tonal quality of your images. Correct minor pattern imperfections such as mirroring and overlaying. Enhance large-format prints. Enhance high-quality presentation images. Creating and saving documents — Elements offers a unique document-creating and viewing tool that enables you to edit your own text documents such as letters, memos, and e-mails. Image adjustment — You have the ability to correct color in minor situations, make color patterns more balanced and harmonious, and fine-tune color for accurate reproduction of the image. Create image collages. Enhance architectural images. Combine images — Elements offers features such as Image Matching and Image Interpolation. Image Matching enables you to make one image fit into another. Image Interpolation enables you to provide the basis for a smaller image and produce a perfect-sized copy. Optimize images — Elements provides tools for optimizing digital images such as contrast, color and tone, grayscale, and brightness. Adobe offers an interactive tutorial at the following web address: www.adobe.com/products/photoshop-elements/photoshop_elements_tutorial.html. Like Photoshop, Elements includes layers. However, the interface is considerably simpler and offers fewer types of layer functionality than does Photoshop. You can have as many layers as you want and create and save them all in your Elements files. To create a layered file, you must access the file in Photoshop.

Cytoarchitecture of the rat paraventricular magnocellular hypothalamic nucleus: evidence for the existence of multiple clusters of dopaminergic and noradrenergic cells with a dense network of gamma-aminobutyric acid-immunoreactive elements. By means of immunocytochemistry for tyrosine hydroxylase (TH), dopamine (DA), D1 and D2 dopamine receptors (D1-R and D2-R) and GABA, the cytoarchitecture of the magnocellular paraventricular nucleus (MPN) in adult rat brains was analyzed. A dense network of TH-immunoreactive (IR) fibers was present in the intercluster zone of the MPN. A qualitative study of the heterogeneous TH-IR profile of cells in the intercluster zone revealed that the majority of these cells was immunostained for D1-R, D2-R and DA. There was a high level of colocalization between TH-IR and D1-R/D2-R or GABA-IR in D1-R-, D2-R- and GABA-containing cells, revealing the existence of multiple clusters of TH-IR cells with high and similar densities of D1-R, D2-R and GABA. Similarities in distribution of D1-R-, D2-R- and GABA-IR cells and morphology of the DA- and D2-R-IR fibers found in the MPN suggest that these multiple clusters of D1-R- and D2-R-IR cells could represent different groups of cells. Each one of these groups of cells may co-transmit D1-R-, D2-R- or GABA-IR axons to the area dorsalis, the median eminence, the nucleus accumbens, and also to the medial preoptic nucleus and the medial septum/diagonal band of Broca. These results suggest that this nucleus may possess a multiple cluster of TH-IR or GABAergic and D1-R, D2-R-IR cells that may represent a heterogeneous population of neurons with specialized functions.Q: If Ω is convex, does $\overline{\Omega}$? The following is from our gallery of images for Issue #7 of We Make Money Not Art: an update on the cybernetic conversation – the link to which can be found here. We interviewed Jedidiah Manuel, co-founder of the Caribbean Biomedical Research Initiative, to talk about the origins of the CBRI and how it's currently developing. The CBRI has been working with local institutions to develop the research, economy and education infrastructure of the Caribbean; Jedidiah works on the interface of these processes. The Caribbean is one of the richest bioregions in the world, possessing 47% of the world's biodiversity, and it is home to 19 sovereign Caribbean states. Yet only three per cent of the Caribbean's gross domestic product is generated from its natural resources. Recently, however, a new movement has emerged to leverage these natural resources in a collective and collaborative effort to propel the Caribbean's economy. According to Jedidiah, "many people are helping the Caribbean because they know the Caribbean is the most generous and helpful place." And this is manifest in the dynamics of the CBRI. According to Jedidiah, "the CBRI would be like a kid at an all-night party." It's a place where there's a range of people that are interested in talking about what it means for the Caribbean to manage its natural resources and ways that you can do that. "This is how we want to make money... we don't want to make money for our personal benefit." But they want to ensure that the societies that benefit from this are local and the communities that have been impacted by the resources. "This is how we want to make money... we don't want to make money for our personal benefit." But they want to ensure that the societies that benefit from this are local and the communities that have been impacted by the resources. That is a very good point. There are ways that this movement may begin to address systemic ills. However, efforts to do this will be effective only if this movement engages people in order for them to contribute to a collective good. "[the Caribbean] is the only place that I know of that is being effected [sic] by the lack of the infrastructure of the economy." The CBRI can help this by building the knowledge, skills
