Let $U \subset Y$ be open. Show that $f^{-1}(U)$ is an open set. I have been looking at all the different proofs of this and of course I still do not really see why this is true. Here's one proof that I came up with (considering $x \in f^{-1}(U)$). Let $V \subset X$ be an open neighborhood of $f^{-1}(U)$. Then $f^{-1}(U) \subset V$ and so there exists $y \in U$ such that $f(y) \in V$. As $f(y) \in U$, then $U = f^{-1}(U)$ (or is it the other way round?) so $U = f^{-1}(U)$. What am I doing wrong? I have the same problem with the other proofs I came across. Why does $f^{-1}(U)$ always be open? Why does this hold, what's so special about $f^{-1}(U)$ and f ? I don't see why there exists a $y \in U$ such that $U = f^{-1}(U)$. I would like to know the 'fundamental' reason of why $f^{-1}(U)$ is open if f is continuous, so I can do similar proofs (just with f)
