How to pass a function from JS to Java function in Android I have an Android Java project and in it I have a method loadFromSqliteDatabase() that gets the ID of a record, searches the database for that ID and retrieves information about it. This works fine. The problem is, I also have a JavaScript listener in the same project that listens to a button and depending on the ID of the record clicked on, it triggers a function that is supposed to pass the data to the function loadFromSqliteDatabase() and start the process again (skipping the process if the process was already running). The problem is that when I click on the button with the JavaScript code, it changes the ID of the record in the database. The moment that happens, the process starts again, but doesn't stop. How can I solve this problem?

Java Code public void loadFromSqliteDatabase() { int ID;
Log.e("SqlLoader", "before query"); String query =
"SELECT ID FROM " + TABLE_NAME;
SQLiteDatabase db =
OpenHelper.getReadableDatabase();
Log.e("SqlLoader", "exists = " + db.isOpen());
Cursor cursor = db.rawQuery(query, null);
Log.e("SqlLoader", "after query = " + query);
if(cursor.getCount() == 0)
loadSqliteRecordsForFirstTime(ID); else
if(cursor.getCount() > 0)
loadSqliteRecordsFromCursor(ID, db); } JavaScript Code var buttonClick = function() { // if
