Yoichi Yamada said he was alarmed by a video that appeared on Twitter with the caption: "This shows the madness of a Tokyo suburb," and claimed that a local would not have seen such a thing. The video shows a woman being chased by the dog in a street in Uchisai village in the town of Ogawara, in western Japan. The woman is then surrounded by people until she gets into a car. "I am shocked by what I saw on the morning of Aug. 8," Mr Yamada told a press conference on Wednesday. "I am concerned that there are people who make prank videos on social media without thinking of the consequences." He continued: "I am trying to understand how many people and for how long the video has been on the internet. If there are people who know that this is a prank, I would like to hear from them." The video, first reported by the Tokyo Shimbun newspaper, shows the woman, carrying a baby, being chased by the dog. Uchisai village, which has a population of 2,300, is a rural community located in the mountainous area around the city of Iwakuni, 6d1f23a050
