Thanks A: First of all, if you want to use @TomTom private IP range for illegal activites then you should use @TomTom. The government of Iran doesn't support any traffic which flows outside of their country's internet infrastructure.

Secondly, you're in Iran. You'll most likely go to prison. CNN is keeping its moneyed friends and allies close: It's hired the author of a book that was staunchly critical of Republicans to join its commentary team as a Senior Political Commentator. Kevin Madden will join John Avlon, April Ryan and Donna Brazile in the "Political Commentators" unit in July, according to a published report. Just signed, to commentary, author and Senior Political Commentator @kevinmadden. Nice to have you on @CNN. pic.twitter.com/Q1Dnv0h2Zt — John Avlon (@JohnAvlon) July 19, 2016 Madden will write "The Inner Circle: How American Politicians and Powerful Economic Interests Hijacked the 2012 Election" with Politico Washington Bureau chief Kenneth Vogel, according to the book's publisher, Penguin Press. The book was released in May. Related: Democrats slam Trump's response to attacks on Khashoggi The book, which will be turned into a six-episode Netflix docu-series called "The Inner Circle" later this year, details how super PACs, wealthy donors and big money aligned with conservative groups and strategists to take over the American political process. In the book, Madden chronicles how a pro-Romney "super PAC" called Restore Our Future "was created to do the bidding of one of Romney's most powerful donors, Marc Leder." In his book, Madden lambasted the Republican Party, accusing it of being controlled by "an unaccountable cadre of megadonors and super PACs" and calling for politicians to "declare war on big money." He even praised President Barack Obama's 2012 campaign, calling it "bold and innovative in a world dominated by the same old, the same old."
