YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK — An Arizona woman accused of killing her boyfriend in Yosemite, Calif., on Monday has been ordered held without bail. According to the San Francisco Chronicle, Yolanda Barajas Carillo, 22, was indicted Thursday for the murder of Carlos Antonio Chanoy and San Mateo County prosecutors charged that she shot him and dumped his body in a north-side Raley's parking lot. ADVERTISEMENT Police were called to the scene by citizens who spotted Chanoy's body, naked except for his underwear, the newspaper reported. According to the warrant, Carillo, his girlfriend of four years, then took a shower at the campground and told a friend that she had shot Chanoy in their tent. An autopsy, however, determined that Chanoy was killed by a bullet to the head and authorities believe that she shot him while he was sleeping. Carillo was charged with one count of murder with a special circumstance of lying in wait, sheriff's officials said. Her arraignment is scheduled for Feb. 16. ADVERTISEMENT According to online records, she has a history of domestic violence with past arrests in Arizona, Texas and California. Chanoy, a 22-year-old who had used methamphetamine, was found dead with a gunshot wound to the head, according to the San Mateo County Sheriff's Office. When deputies arrived at the Raley's lot they found Chanoy's body slumped in the driver's seat of his truck. ADVERTISEMENT Chanoy was found near the road about a quarter-mile away. The Chronicle reported that when authorities searched her truck, they found a rifle and ammunition as well as a knife. ADVERTISEMENT Chanoy had reportedly told a friend in April that he had stolen the gun and knife and reported them stolen, but had no explanation as to why he was carrying them around, the newspaper reported.
