People who experience enjoyment from classic Metroidvania games will be pleased by Usurper's less linear structure, abundance of secrets, rare collectibles, the re-worked area layout, the powerful character growth system, and the fast-paced battle system.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a nuclear fuel assembly with cylindrical fuel rods and a rectangular fuel assembly, each comprising a plurality of such nuclear fuel rods arranged in a fuel assembly. 2. Related Art There have been proposed and used a variety of nuclear fuel assemblies of fuel rods of different shapes. The assemblies disclosed in the following JP-A's (Japan's unexamined published applications) Nos. 08-239727, 10-282092, 10-282093, 10-282094, 10-282095, and 10-282096 comprise a plurality of fuel rods arranged in a square lattice formation. One disclosed in the following JP-A No. 09-22712 comprises a plurality of fuel rods arranged in a square lattice formation and disposed in parallel with each other while forming their fuel rods parallel to a long axis of the fuel assembly. Moreover, another disclosed in the following JP-A No. 09-22713 comprises a plurality of fuel rods in which some of their end portions are overlapped in a parallel arrangement, the fuel rods being arranged in a square lattice formation. However, the prior art has the following problems. As the fuel rods are arranged in an assembly, their outlay on the assembly increases, which makes handling of the assembly difficult. The handling of the assembly requires advanced techniques. In addition, the assembly with the fuel rods overlapped in parallel, as disclosed in the above JP-A No. 09-22713, may be applied only to the assembly in which a predetermined number of the fuel rods are arranged in a lattice formation so as to form a fuel assembly. Further, the prior art fuel assembly has a problem that the assembly with the fuel rods arranged in a square lattice formation is inferior in neutron rate to the assembly with the fuel rods arranged in parallel. What's new:

India It is becoming common for some of the best eateries to emulate their American motherlands in Asia and notably Turkey. For example, Harim Irish restaurant already has much fanfare following from neighboring Taiwan and it is considered as one of the top restaurants within the region. Homelab in Abu Dhabi is also growing fast and I have a feeling they would very soon overtake Sushirestaurant for this trend in the same way. There is a lot of recognition for Fatboy's in the Middle East and the flagship restaurant in Beirut has become very popular for the Baku restaurant as well. Many restaurant business owners in other names and countries of the region have begun to follow this trend as well and fast growing Gull Kebap in India is the latest entrant into the race. This restaurant has all the chefs that are expected and as per my views never make the mistake of adding too much salt to the kebabs. I prefer to be addicted to salt and spicy food if it is done at the right place. It has another very important key element to the success of the restaurant in the form of a mouthful of oxygen tank which is called the 'azap'. They do miracles with the oxygen which is put into the kebabs on the grill and the fire. The oxygen is all fresh and the attendees of the restaurant can smell it as well. Its a very simple innovation by the restaurant owner and it is a very interesting concept that sits a little too high to the ordinary meat cook in India. However, I think I found a new trend over there in India and I knew I had to share it with my readers. I know Gull Kebap is not very well known in India so I will first introduce to you the restaurant itself. It is located in the Bhendi Bazaar area of Mumbai's Bandra East which is the quietest and most financial minded area of Mumbai and since it is perfect for this type of restaurant and business, it has taken form. Gull Kebap is a small family owned business and they are the only employer at this five table order only restaurant. They are a broken kitchen team between two ex-pat chefs from Israel and Yemen and when chef Eddy and Ashur came to Mumbai from Israel, they opened the restaurant in 2011 and it was the most unforgettable experience in their two lives. Now they are cooking kebabs with azap for their customers and they have brought positive news
