Pros: - Pure gameplay. You will have to choose between different queue types, so it is good to exercise your skills. - You can see if you are a pro or not by your strategy, sometimes it is obvious you're wrong. - You have different types of queue (you can specify the min and max number for each type of queue, -... you get the idea) and they can be easily accessed by mouse or... you can even specify a random type to play - Many heroes that can be recruited (you can specify if you want a hero for a specific type of queue) - A cool chart that shows your ranking from your playtime to your level - You can make your own queue, so if you got a great idea you can easily implement it. Cons: - You can't save your game, it resets every time. - You need to download the whole app in order to play (You can play on the queue simulator, it will download it directly to your computer) ... and more! This game is fun! With our advice and tester, we made some improvements on the game. What's new:

, were displayed during the EA GDC 2013 digital day. Securitas has worked with EA to develop custom CA solutions targeting the retail, transportation, real estate, construction and entertainment sectors. Deliverability is an increasingly important topic for property managers, with ERP one of the areas that can have a large impact on deliverability. Securitas'' distribution specialists have created a method to test the reliability of all deliverable items in Securitas supply chains, with the End-to-End Delivery Analysis Module. The module calculates the total cost of cargo theft at any point in the supply chain and helps to highlight items that are at risk, allowing property managers to plan accordingly. Deliverable assets need to be transported from any number of sites - such as warehouses, dealers, factories, vendors, construction sites or land developments - to any number of destinations or locations within a region. They also need to be delivered through different modes - such as pipeline, truck, train, helicopter, or aircraft - to locations globally. Normally, large numbers of items get lost, causing huge costs and thousands of jobs being lost, as well as wasted resources. Local and global negotiations then need to be conducted with parties who are responsible for managing these items, such as delivery companies, inventory management systems, real estate companies, and packaging suppliers. These negotiations come with issues, such as unclear responsibility, and the need to draw up a clear insurance contract. It is in these situations that the End-to-End Delivery Analysis Module (EE-DA) can be valuable. According to the global security solutions provider's data, the worldwide cost of stolen or lost freight is around $14 billion per year. Costly items subject to theft or loss are typically paper pulp, construction materials, and products, such as electronics. The development of Securitas' EE-DA offers the possibility to quickly and accurately analyse the total cost of cargo theft in the entire supply chain, calculate the total cost of cargo theft to all parties and stakeholders, identify potential cargo theft risk and highlight all items that are vulnerable to theft. You can download the EE-DA product from the Securitas website, and trial it in a live situation, where you can imagine working out your risk. Nighttime means nighttime, y'all.
