This study investigated the efficacy of plasma assisted ultrasonic hydrothermal treatment in the removal of insoluble mineral matter, including apatite, from bovine cortical bone, utilizing a plasma jet. The effect of added hydrogen peroxide on the ultrasonic hydrothermal process was also studied. Both static and continuous flow experiments were performed. The highest mineral removal rate, 69%, was achieved at ultrasonic power of 50 W and treating time of 10 min in 10 M hydrochloric acid. Further experiments in this study indicate that the mineral removal was not significantly affected by the addition of hydrogen peroxide, in contrast to the findings by the static method. Both static and continuous flow experiments showed higher mineral removal rate than the static method. This is due to the fact that the continuous flow experiments provide more exposure time than the static method, thus providing more opportunities to remove mineral matter from the bone.Q: Prove that $\sum_{i=1}^{\infty} \frac{1}{2^i} \le$

KeyMacro is a very simple keybinding manager, which can be used to automate any keybinding. For example, if you are using a lot of music software, you may find the Shift + C + F key combination helpful. This binding is a shortcut for creating your own "Command", "Control" and "Function" key bindings. These can be used for opening different applications, for searching the internet, or even for an alternative function. The first thing you need to do, is to create a new binding. After that, you can choose a shortcut that will be used when this binding is applied. Each shortcut you create can be applied to a macro in your key bindings configuration. To create a new binding, click on the Add button, on the left side of the interface. Once you have added the shortcut, you can choose whether you want it to be a "Command", "Control", or "Function" binding. You can then choose the corresponding key combination for that type of binding. Each combination you add will be saved in the configuration file. KeyMacro does not allow you to change the application your shortcuts are using. If you want to change it, you will have to remove the shortcut completely and then add it again. By default, there are some default bindings included, but you can also create your own. You can choose what shortcuts you want to use. You can choose multiple shortcuts for a single key. For example, if you want to use a "Shift" + "Alt" + "P" combination for opening your torrent client, you can use a "Function" binding with a shortcut that would look like this: P:/alt+Shift+P:/ You can also create shortcuts that will apply to any music software that you use. For example, you could use: F1:/shift+P:/ Once you have created a shortcut you want to use, you can then choose how you want the shortcut to be used, and assign a shortcut key to it. You can apply multiple shortcuts to one key. If you apply the same shortcut to a key, it will be used for all of the combinations that are assigned to the same key. The maximum number of shortcuts you can apply to a key is 5. Once you hit 5, it will start to break down the shortcuts. If you want to change how a shortcut is assigned, click on the "Bindings" button. You can then choose what keys you want to use 2edc1e01e8
