User Reviews A MATTER OF MURDER is a fun old school murder mystery game from Panoply Studios. Each level in the game presents a mystery to solve and, as it turns out, you'll have to go through the house with detective Bob Willmore. The game uses a point and click system to navigate through the game. You are able to search for items and items in the game to help solve the mystery. There are various puzzles to be solved, from a famous ballet company to find the stolen tickets and an ancient pewter found in a clue box. Besides the basics of the game, the rest of the game is up to the player's imagination. What do you think, did the murderer actually get away with it or did a friend of Bob's cover the crime? Did the killer know about Bob's revenge, or did they just think that Bob just wanted a quiet life? You decide, although there is one ending that Bob will point to and smile. The game is a fun old school time and lots of fun. While the story is great, it takes some time to get to the end. The game includes a lot of weird and cool items that can be found in the game. The graphics are very well done and the level design is interesting. All in all, this game is a hidden gem. Reviewer's Score: 8/10 | Originally Posted: 11/21/2007 Developer's Summary: Take Bob Willmore on a real-time adventure through a living, breathing crime scene. I have found a reference where they are being tested on the International Test System (IT3D) in some BS6 content but apparently they are not included in the inventory yet, so i might need to hunt them down myself? Screenshot available here: It's been a couple years since my last report (WTW, another 10-ish month hiatus) and this time with two BSS levels (39 and 40) finished. I've added a more consistent image for this report and some extensive thoughts on my past year of bazaar design as a game and what I think about when design business for y'all. WTW: In early September, I finished up two BSS levels, one at level 39 (Outer Core) and one at level 40 (Black Dragon Shrine). Both were pushed back in time a couple days just due to power issues, so they're not necessarily consistent with one another. Both of the BSS levels have their own PPT and their own monster set. Though I think it would be interesting to wait until the sequel of the BSS levels comes out in 2018 and then do them all at the same time with the same design concept to see how much the difference there is. The prototype for Outer Core was finished in May and used to test for feedback before moving on to the SD implementation. Unfortunately by the time I had gone through the whole
