In addition to the crack growth rate, the fracture mechanics of crack propagation also determines the ultimate component survival.

However, the crack growth rate describes the component response most closely under conditions of design loading. The ultimate component survival depends on the type of fatigue crack growth (fatigue crack growth rate = $G - S$) and on the crack mechanism (fatigue crack growth mechanism = C). The crack growth rate is proportional to the growth coefficient C . In fatigue crack growth, the crack velocity is proportional to the applied stress intensity factor range. This constant velocity depends on the applied cyclic stress intensity factor range, the maximum stress intensity factor K_{max} , and the stress intensity factor range K_{max} minus the stress intensity factor range K_{min} .

The term CG equals $K_{max} 0.45$. The two-scale or two-process fracture models are termed hyperbrittle C types, while the one-process models are termed hypo-brittle C types. Whereas the crack growth constant, C , is higher for two-scale models, the crack growth rate is higher for one-scale models. Three overlapping generations of Muslims explain most of the increased support for Republicans among Indian Muslims in the U.S. regardless of names. The full generational wave model is a general way of thinking about how different generations will make different policy choices. Tolerance may be an important metric. A troubled society would be one with little tolerance for addicts, criminals, and disabled people. But it's a lot better to be tolerant than not, Chipman said, pointing to a study showing that we're safer in a tolerant society than we are in a homophobic society.

The federal and state governments don't keep rigorous statistics on the number of people in substance abuse recovery. (They also don't count treatment completion.) There's also no data on the numbers of shootings and murders committed by people in recovery. And so the best way to compare the relative success of different treatment programs is to look at the number of people who completed treatment in a given year and how many arrests they faced after treatment completion. We searched for arrest rates in 14 states and found that treatment completion reduced arrest rates more than half of the time. One could also look at whether treatment completion reduces rates of self-reported drug and alcohol use and social problems. GunViolenceResearch.orgs survey of manufacturers shows that 73 percent report sales to 2,000 people or fewer, the majority of whom are small businesses. The biggest problem for small businesses has always been to find the time to be their customers. In 2010, legislation limiting their ability to do so, as well as new regulations imposed by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms reduced the number of gun dealers from 48,000 to 20,000. Additional regulations imposed in the wake of the Sandy Hook tragedy were put in place by Obama, including expanded background checks and a prohibition on the sale of firearms at gun shows. In response to these and other restrictions, gun dealer organizations have developed a gun industry infrastructure comprised of trade associations, lobbying groups and industry-specific research and advocacy organizations, as well as firearms retailers and manufacturers. In the beginning of 2013, there were more than 60 gun industry trade associations, most of them funded by the firearms industry, that provided a rich source of data and a forum for dialogue and coordination. 5ec8ef588b
