Once you have converted the.VHD to a bootable drive, you need to use the Windows 7 or Vista recovery console to fix the system file corruption and require activation. As mentioned above, the VHD images will not pass validation. An alternative solution is to use the Windows XP ISO files that are available in the internet archives as an alternative. As for using the OS on a Windows 10 PC, I do not have any experience with that. However, the best you can do is install Windows XP inside a virtual machine on your Windows 10 PC and then run the OS from the virtual machine. Install the VBox, after you have installed the Vbox you can create any of the operating system on it. I created a virtual machine for Windows XP professional x86 because I had Windows 8.1 on my main system. Its only a difference if you want to run Windows 10 or XP on Windows 8.1.
