1. Create a New Project Step 1 Launch Photoshop and create a new document. As you know, a document is simply an image file that contains layers. Photoshop will create a new file for you, using a default size. If you want to resize the document, just drag it into a frame and resize it. Step 2 Add a new layer. The easiest way to do this is to create a new image and then click on the New Layer button (which looks like a piece of paper with an arrow coming out of the top) on the top left. It's where the Add button used to be if you're using the older version. Step 3 The easiest way to add a new layer is to click on the New Layer button (image) To create an image mask, you must create a selection first and then add a layer mask by clicking on the layer mask button (image) in the Layers palette or by pressing CTRL + click on the image. 2. Create a Solid Color on a New Layer Step 1 Click on the New Layer button (image) Step 2 Select a solid color like magenta or white Step 3 Click on the layer with the color in it Step 4 Drag an image with transparency into the Canvas and resize it to fill the new layer Step 5 Delete the new layer Step 6 Press CTRL + D, and Photoshop will duplicate the layers image and place them at the same position in the Canvas 3. Cut Text and Clone Images Step 1 Open up any text you'd like to work with, such as a welcome text or a tagline. Step 2 Click on the New Layer button (image) Step 3 Click and drag the text out to create a new layer (image) Step 4 Make the layer black Step 5 Let Photoshop automatically select a color for the text Step 6 Press CTRL + X, and you'll now be able to easily select the text Step 7 Press CTRL + C, and Photoshop will clone the image, making a new file Step 8 Press CTRL + V to paste the file Step 9 Position the image where you'd like to paste it Step 10 Resize the image to

Today we have a special guest to sit in the driver's seat and talk to us all about Inward Design: Amazing, True Stories and Transformations. Meet Jason Bond, founder of Elevate Design, whose software has been called one of the best in the industry. The best part is that he is sharing his story with us about how he started and the mission he created with his team. Inward Design: Amazing, True Stories and Transformations kicks off at 4 p.m. MDT today. The prevalence of neurologic disorders in children with schizophrenia-like psychosis or affective disorders was investigated, in order to distinguish these disorders by their prognostic and diagnostic differences. At the Department of Child Psychiatry and Psychiatry, Nagoya City University Hospital, 99 patients with schizophrenia-like psychosis (positive symptom spectrum: n = 51, negative syndrome spectrum: n = 46) or affective disorder (major depressive episode: n = 25, bipolar disorder: n = 27) aged 8 to 17 years were investigated by means of detailed clinical interviews and neurological and psychiatric examinations. The prevalence of familial neurological disorders among the patients was significantly higher than that among the healthy controls. The patients with schizophrenia-like psychosis and bipolar disorder showed a significantly lower prevalence of familial neurological disorders than the healthy controls, while the patients with affective disorder did not. This trend suggests that schizophrenia-like psychosis and bipolar disorder in childhood are associated with a low prevalence of familial neurological disorders, while affective disorder in childhood is not.Direct electrochemical determination of cyanide ion based on the oxidation of CuO nanoclusters. Molecularly imprinted polymers (MIPs) have been prepared by electropolymerization of E-methyl viologen on a glassy carbon electrode in the presence of cyanoacetic acid. The imprinted and functionalized surface of MIPs was characterized by electrochemical impedance spectroscopy and cyclic voltammetry. CuO nanoclusters were electrochemically deposited on MIPs, and adsorbed amounts of CuO on MIPs were determined by linear sweep voltammetry. The electrochemical determination of cyanide ion has

Q: Finding the name of the current month in Google Spreadsheet I am using Google Spreadsheet, and i need a way to find the name of the month where i am at. As of right now, i have a formula that finds the date the date field is. I then use the find function to get the Month Name. However, I don't think that is the best method. Any ideas on how to find the name of the month that i am in (based on the date field) and then using that name as a sort of default name? =IFERROR(FIND("/", A1, 1), "No Month") =IFERROR(FIND(MONTH(A1), 1), "No Month") =IFERROR(FIND(MID("01/", A1, 9), 1), "No Month") I need to find the date the date field is not just the number of days in the date, because the dates vary. Thanks A: First of all, you should avoid using plain FIND() as it will return a string value. Try using REPLACE() instead: =IFERROR(RIGHT(A1, FIND("/", A1, 1)),"No Month") Ceiling() to the power of two will always give you an integer. So: =IFERROR(CEILING(MONTH(A1)),"No Month") Or, if you wanted to use names rather than months you could use: =IFERROR(MID(ADDRESS(1,1),1,FIND("/",ADDRESS(1,1)),"Month"),"No Month") However, again, be careful with plain FIND(). For example, the query =IFERROR(FIND("/",$A1,1),"") returns only an empty string or NULL depending on your locale. For instance, in the Italian version, it returns NULL, while in the English version it returns "". Fluorescence spectroscopy is a powerful tool to monitor binding interactions and folding events in real time. Fluorescence-based biochemical and bioanalytical techniques represent an important tool to study and characterize macromolecular structures and interactions with their biological surroundings in real time. Here, different aspects of the use of fluorescence spectroscopy in biochemistry are reviewed and
