DESCRIPTION: The hypothesis to be tested is that the "collective effervescence" (CE) is the basic mechanism of release in vitro of hormones and peptides from endocrine secretory granules in the parafollicular cells of the thyroid and the intermediate lobe of the pituitary gland. The CE is assumed to result from the increase in the amount and surface area of the granule surface membrane. The cell membrane surface in the follicular cells will be studied by freeze-fracture electron microscopy. The CE is supposed to occur in all cells that secrete bioactive molecules in a stimulated manner, whether the bio c6a93da74d
