Its also worth noting that many of the factions, such as the United Dutch Provinces, British India, Revolutionary France, Sweden, and Prussia, have a playable Slavic-speaking minority, despite being majority Germanic. This is a surprising issue, since even in the era in which they were established, the dominance of various Germanic and Slavic cultures in Europe was easily demonstrated. And as we learn later, even the ostensible nobleman-hero of the game, Napoleon Bonaparte, was of Corsican heritage.

However, in a historical context, the "Slavic" nations such as Russia, Prussia, and Poland, were of little consequence. Their populations did not reach over 20 million, their empires were readily annexed by their neighbours, and their historical experience does not seem to be represented in the game, except as a resource and a trading partner. Uniquely, a historical single nation that could topple the entire modern world, the Islamic Caliphate, was lost to history some years ago. The Caliphate, formed in 711 C.E., had an extraordinary legacy - uniting the lands of Muslim empires from Spain to Russia, and then in power for almost a millennium. Also, unlike other mid-level warlords, the ruler was usually a man. However, this Islamic Empire began falling into power struggles and invasions on multiple fronts in the late 7th century. The resulting internal conflict was one of the primary causes of the rapid decline of the Muslim world. During the last century of the 10th century, the caliphate was replaced by the Seljuk Empire in 1071, which attempted to reestablish a spiritual leader, though nominally an independent entity.

The game features more than a hundred 18th century factions, yet only eleven of them are available to play as in-depth historic battles and other player activities. In western Europe, these are the United Dutch Provinces, France, Great Britain, Spain and Sweden, and in eastern and central Austria, Prussia, Europe, Russia and Poland Lithuania. While Mughal Empire and the Maratha Confederacy will be the major powers on the Indian subcontinent, in the Balkans and Middle East, the Ottoman Empire is the main faction. The New World colonies of the major powers are represented as protectorates of their home nation. The wilderness of the oceans, forests, and deserts is the last free space, and the modern fossil fuel empire imposes sameness even there. When it comes to wilderness and wildlife today, theres just less of it. Perhaps the most vivid example of this is the replacement of lush, biodiverse rainforests with straight rows of uniform oil palm plantations. These plantations are essentially dead chemical deserts. Aside from the species Elaeis guineensis, virtually nothing else can live there. The plantations are constantly sprayed with intense herbicide and pesticide poisons, and protected from animals that may try to inhabit the area.
