It is not an admission that any of the information provided herein is prior art, or material, to the presently described or claimed inventions, or that any publication or document that is specifically or implicitly referenced is prior art. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to the field of poultry. More specifically, embodiments of the present invention relate to broiler chicken feeding management and health monitoring systems. 2. Description of the Related Art There is a need in the art for improved methods for feeding chicken. Chickens are high maintenance animals which require skilled care and attention. There are concerns about the development of diseases from the stress of transport to a growing farm. Chickens are highly susceptible to a variety of gastro-intestinal disorders, including such conditions as: growth stunting, swollen stomachs, illness, increased stomach acidity, decreased appetite, total care or feed consumption by the animal and/or increased suffering or mortality of the animal. Feeding chickens is a labor intensive process. It takes between 1 to 2 hours to mix the feed and clean the feeder every time a fresh batch of feed is loaded. The traditional process is to clean the feeders by hand, and mix fresh feed to a prepared feeder with a weighted feed paddle in approximately 15 minutes. The birds must spend 1 to 2 hours or 6d1f23a050
