I just saw a user on Twitter report this with a screenshot, It's a website which, for some reason, turns part of my page blue. I can't find any CSS, or any trace of it on their page. There's nothing obviously wrong, I can't figure out what would cause this. How can I go about finding out what is causing the problem? A: this answer is NOT for fixing this issue, it is ONLY for other people who face similar issue. I faced the same problem of this website, which gets an undesirable color change on my computer. I never noticed the issue before, even after many cycles on this site. Then when I switch computers, the problem exists again on the new machine! As many web developers know, when we are testing a website in our local machine, it will make sense to use: Firebug IE F12 developer tools Chrome Extension - Chrome Developer Tools Then you will see the error or the bug from the chrome extension. In my case, when I go to IE F12 developer tools, I saw this. Click on More Actions and under Inspect Element, click on "Inspect Element". Look out for this: @media screen and (-webkit-min-device-pixel-ratio:0) { @font-family: tahoma; src: url("") format('truetype'); } body {
