Serial...5-Methylcytosine phosphodiesterase in man: inhibition of the enzyme by efavirenz. Efavirenz is an antiretroviral drug that suppresses plasma concentrations of HIV type 1 RNA and has recently received approval for the treatment of HIV infection. In vitro, it is a potent inhibitor of many phosphodiesterases. Some evidence suggests that the action of the drug is mediated through interaction with phosphodiesterase 1. Previous studies have shown that the compound can also inhibit the demethylase 5-methylcytosine phosphodiesterase, which is implicated in HIV transcriptional silencing. We have demonstrated that the anti-HIV agent efavirenz is indeed a potent inhibitor of human 5-methylcytosine phosphodiesterase, with a K(i) of 66 nm. Unlike the inhibitory effects of dideoxycytidine on HIV transcription, the inhibition of the human enzyme does not correlate with cytosine substitution in the HIV 5'LTR. Furthermore, the drug did not inhibit phosphodiesterase activity in HeLa nuclear extracts. * * For the full copyright and license information, please view the LICENSE * file that was distributed with this source code. */ namespace Pred
