The following are the various components of PNWFS: PNWFS - Web Server Client - This is the software that your users will use to connect to PNWFS. Any standard web browser will work. Internet explorer, Mozilla Firefox, Opera, Netscape, AOL, etc.

Downloading Files When a user accesses your PNWFS server you will be able to decide what files will be downloadable by your users. You can have a list of files to download or you can allow them to download entire directories. As long as your computer is set to accept connections from other computers your files will be accessible through the internet.

Features: No additional software to install Users can download files in two ways: drag and drop from one browser window to another browser window or download a file to a folder of their choice. The only software that your users will need to have is a web browser. Users can connect to your PNWFS server without knowing the host name or the IP address. You can hide specific directories from being displayed in your browser using our "invisible file" feature You can have a "hidden" directory of your files that your clients can't access You can have "hidden" directories for your users to upload files to. Users can view the contents of a directory or specific file Users can browse through all of the files on your PNWFS server Users can view the filesize and "time left to download" Users can change the text and background colors of the "invisible file" text to their preference Users can request files by drag and drop from your desktop to another browser window Users can use our "invisible file" feature to control where their downloads are stored Users can control how many times that they can connect to your PNWFS server. File uploads are handled differently than downloads. After a user uploads a file to your PNWFS server, your file will be available to the user for as long as the user is connected. Users can control the name of their files as they are downloaded

Note: Some Windows operating systems may not support opening multiple instances of internet explorer. If your operating system allows this then you can use it to access your PNWFS server.

Possible Issues Possible issues: You may need to setup your network to allow "remote system connections" You will have to change your file permissions to allow others to view/access

Notes on Installation: -9000.zip is only for windows users. I'm not going to make one for mac. Sorry. -Even if you have XP or higher, you might need to download this from time to time. It will update your x32/x64 to the latest version. -This is the alpha version of the Windows installer. It's basically a checklist that will make sure the installation process goes smoothly. -If you already have Spelunky installed on your PC, uninstall it before you start.
