I don't want it to be to the detriment of other users and I don't want it to violate forum rules. So I just suggest to think and offer some options. In my opinion the easiest solution is to create a thread in which forum members can make suggestions. If we can't come up with something, I, for my part, would be willing to submit some ideas of my own that might be acceptable. Let's give it a try, shall we? What do you say? Let's give it a try, shall we? # Let's give it a try # We could argue about this topic ad infinitum. On the one hand, everyone is entitled to his opinion. On the other hand, you can't live your life without consulting someone. And then, sometimes, even if we don't agree with someone, it's still worth listening to their opinion. Sometimes, that opinion can be quite helpful. Maybe even more helpful than the one we have. And so, how is it worthwhile to make decisions: 1. Alone. Making decisions alone is very difficult, though not always. Very often we are just afraid of making a mistake. But why is it that when we begin to make decisions alone, we are literally bursting with desire to share our plans with others?

You've probably experienced this contradictory behavior before. As soon as we make a decision, we immediately want to tell everyone about it. Especially if that decision involves something significant. For example, you have made a decision to get a new job. You do not want to tell all your friends about it at once, you are not yet confident in the result of the interview. How do you know if you got the interview if you didn't get an answer quickly? There are many such services on the Internet that allow you to keep track of new job postings, as well as to find out about new appointments. How to find out if you got an interview There are many different sites and systems that allow you to track new job openings as well as find out about new appointments. Among them are the official websites of some companies, as well as special services for job seekers.
