Binding of the transcription factor C/EBP alpha to a cluster of DNA containing three cyclic AMP-responsive element (CRE)-like sequences. In starved hepatocytes, cAMP signaling via cAMP-responsive element (CRE)-binding protein (CREB) stimulates liver-specific expression of genes such as the rat cytochrome P-450s. In the present study, we isolated a portion of the rat cytochrome P-450c gene encompassing 119 bases of DNA. The region included three cyclic AMP-responsive element (CRE)-like sequences. Binding of CREB to the 3' half of the isolated region was shown in vitro, and specific binding of CREB to the first CRE-like sequence in the gene was demonstrated in vivo. CREB is therefore a bifunctional protein, binding directly to DNA to activate transcription, but also to other proteins to regulate their function. article 10.20.11 MSNBC's Worst Fallout: A New Series Is Growing With the channel's ratings falling, viewers will soon have an opportunity to see the stories of other female correspondents. In March 2010, Tyra Banks's upcoming talk show was not only highly anticipated, but also seen as a test of the cable network's commitment to promoting diverse and female voices on television. The network announced the show during the 2009 Academy Awards and was unapologetic about its goal to "bring a more diverse outlook to the forefront of entertainment culture." The show, titled The Tyra Banks Show, debuted to a massive audience of
